

1) An Afternoon in the Wine Country Tour

Blessed with almost perfect climate for growing grapes, Northern California has become the most prestigious wine-producing center in the United States. The vineyards are nestled amid the golden hills of Napa and Sonoma, located only one hour north of the Bay Area.

Starting in Napa, we'll view the hand hewn stone and modern wineries that dot the vineyards stretching along both sides of the highway. Growing here are the varietal grapes that produce the fine wines for which the region is famous - Chardonnay, Sauvignon Blanc, Fume Blanc, Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot and Zinfandel to name but a few. At a carefully selected winery, guides will await to lead you through the processes of fermentation and aging and then into the bottling rooms. A tasting of the wines produced will follow.

On the other side of the mountain in Sonoma the visitor can relive early California history...seeing the historic Town Square, it's Spanish Mission, adobe ruins and the Bear Flag Monument. In Sonoma, an enormous shaded Plaza is rimmed with old adobe buildings and carefully preserved historic structures. A stroll around the town square will take you past former Mexican army barracks, 19th century hotels and the pristine mission founded by the Mission Padres in 1825. The Plaza is well-known for chic boutiques, bounteous shops and excellent restaurants. Your tour guide will direct you to the restaurant of your choice for a no-host dinner, before returning to Oakland.

Tamalpais and down into the cool green 500 acre Sequoia forest, named for the naturalist, John Muir. We stroll through redwoods which date back thousands of years, some standing twelve stories high. Walk at your own pace on a self-guided tour. The grandeur of the redwoods speak for themselves.

Next we will depart for Sausalito where you can browse through the shops in this picturesque old fishing village and artist's colony. Later, we will meet at the dock to board a ferryboat for a ride across the Bay to San Francisco, cruising past Alcatraz for a magnificent view of the San Francisco shoreline. 3) Stinson Beach and Point Reyes

Stinson Beach is a treasure tucked between the coastal bluffs north of San Francisco. It is close to the city, yet seems like it is hundreds of miles away. The town itself stretches along a sandy spit and up into the hills to the south of Bolinas Lagoon. The beach administered by the National Park Service is on the south end of town, providing white sandy beaches, crashing waves, and picnicking sites for visitors year-round.

Point Reyes Lighthouse and National Seashore

Point Reyes National Seashore contains unique elements of biological and historical interest in a spectacularly scenic panorama of thunderous ocean breakers, open grasslands, bushy hillsides and forested ridges. Point Reyes National Seashore comprises over 100 square miles, including 32,000 acres of coastal wilderness area. Estuaries, windswept beaches, coastal scrub grasslands, salt and freshwater marshes, and coniferous forests create a haven of 80 miles of unspoiled and undeveloped coastline.

The Point Reyes Peninsula, which juts into the Pacific Ocean just north of the Golden Gate, has long been treacherous for ships traveling to and from San Francisco. In hopes of reducing the number of shipwrecks, Congress in 1852 appropriated $25,000 to build the Point Reyes Lighthouse. The lighthouse site is now within the Point Reyes National Seashore. In January and February, the Point Reyes Lighthouse is one of the best places along the California Coast for seeing California Gray Whales on their annual migration from Alaska to Mexico.

4) Ano Nuevo Reserve – Home Of The Elephant Seals

Today, we will visit the Ano Nuevo Reserve to view the huge elephant seals that occupy the area beaches and sand dunes as their breeding ground. Located 40 miles south of San Francisco on Highway 1, Ano Nuevo Reserve is a beautiful rocky windswept point on the Pacific Ocean.

The Spanish maritime explorer Sebastian Vizcaino sailed by the point on January 3, 1603. His diarist and chaplain of the expedition, Father Antonio de la Ascension, named it Punta de Año Nuevo (New Year's Point) for the day on which they sighted it in 1603.

Today, the point remains much as Vizcaino saw it from his passing ship. Lonely, undeveloped, wild. Elephant seals, sea lions, and other marine mammals come ashore to rest, mate, and give birth in the sand dunes or on the beaches and offshore islands. It is a unique and unforgettable natural spectacle that hundreds of thousands of people come to witness each year.
